Welcome to Auburn, New York

Our location in the Finger Lakes is a truly beautiful region to visit. Auburn's quality of life is the main reason why my wife and I have lived here all of our lives, and we can attest Auburn is a great place to live and visit. Even Forbes Magazine has ranked the City of Auburn as the "Best Small City to Raise a Family" in the northeast!

Whether you are interested in our famous museums, Auburn Doubledays baseball, flourishing arts, celebrated craft beverage scene, lake activities, or vibrant nightlife, there is truly something for everyone. We invite you to learn more about the sites, places, and people that have earned our city the distinction of "History's Hometown," and browse suggested itineraries that will appeal to history buffs, outdoor enthusiasts, and families eager to explore Auburn.

In 2022, we honored Harriet Tubman's bicentennial birthday with citywide celebrations, and in 2023, we are excited to invite everyone to learn more about Tubman's life in Auburn with the restoration completion of the Harriet Tubman National Historical Park - Thompson Memorial AME Zion Church.

Make your first stop the NYS Equal Rights Heritage Center, where you'll find visitor information on all that our city has to offer—there's so much that it'll take a few days to see it all. Our many fine attractions, hotels, restaurants, and retail owners will be more than thrilled to welcome you with top hospitality.

Enjoy your stay in Auburn; we are glad you are here.

Sincerely,

Michael D. Quill
Mayor, Auburn

Small City, Big History

From Harriet Tubman's chosen home to the creation of movies with sound, many of the City of Auburn's attractions are intertwined through world-changing people, places, and inventions.

Take William H. Seward, famous for his purchase of Alaska. He moved to Auburn in 1824 after marrying Frances Miller, and became a state senator, governor, U.S. senator, and secretary of state to Presidents Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson. The home he and his family occupied is now the Seward House Museum (pictured).

Frances Seward befriended Tubman and opened her home as a stop on the Underground Railroad. Frances sold Tubman a farm at 180 South Street, where she lived for 54 years and created the Harriet Tubman Home for the Aged and Indigent Negroes. The site is now part of the Harriet Tubman National Historical Park.

Later, Tubman helped build the Thompson Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church on Parker Street. The church is now owned by the National Park Service. Both Tubman and the Swards are buried in Fort Hill Cemetery (pictured), as are Silas and Jane Bradley, who funded the construction of Bradley Memorial Chapel at the entrance.

The chapel's architect was Auburn native Julius Schweinfurth, who created a trust that was used to build the Schweinfurth Art Center. Walter Long, then director of the Cayuga Museum of History & Art, also served as the Schweinfurth Art Center's first director.

The Cayuga Museum, a central spoke for historical connections, is located in the former home of the Willards and Cases. Sisters Georgiana and Caroline Willard commissioned Tiffany Glass and Decorating Co. to build and furnish Willard Memorial Chapel in memory of their parents.

Cousin Willard Case later inherited the Willard home. He and his son, Theodore, converted one of the property's greenhouses into a laboratory, where Theodore Case invented sound film technology. The building now houses the Case Research Laboratory, a museum that highlights the invention that forever altered the film industry.

In 1896, Willard Case donated the land and the money to build Seymour Public Library, which has information about Tubman's life in Auburn.

In 1936, Ted Case sold his mansion to Walter Long for "$5 and a box of cigars" to create the Cayuga Museum and later donated his research lab and contents. The property also includes a brick carriage house that Case outfitted with a movie theater and sound studio. In 1958, the space housed Auburn Children's Theater, which later grew into the Merry-Go-Round Playhouse at Emerson Park, now known as The REV Theatre Company.

The playhouse centerpiece chandelier came from the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, (pictured) formerly located across from Memorial City Hall where the NYS Equal Rights Heritage Center now sits. The Women's Union later merged with the Auburn YMCA.

Both the WEIU and City Hall were gifts of the Osborne family, whose descendants include agriculture industrialist David Munson Osborne; his wife, Eliza Wright Osborne; and their prison reformer son, Thomas Mott Osborne.

D.M. Osborne & Co. became a world leader in machine manufacturing and was acquired by International Harvester Co. Learn more at Ward W. O'Hara Agricultural Museum.

Eliza Wright Osborne (pictured)—like her mother, Martha Coffin Wright, and aunt Lucretia Mott—made her home a hotbed of abolition and suffrage activity, and founded the WEIU.

Auburn may be a small city, but it is large with history.

NYS Equal Rights Heritage Center

25 South Street | (315) 258-9820 | equalrightsheritage.com

The NYS Equal Rights Heritage Center is the official welcome center and tourism hub for the City of Auburn. It shines a light on New York's pivotal role in progressing social movements, as well as the city's rich history, culture, and events—past, present, and future.

The state-of-the-art Seeing Equal Rights in New York State exhibition brings to life the causes and individuals connected to this history through songs, speeches, games, portraits, political posters, animated maps, and video timelines.

Marvel at the building's elegant architecture that frames the attractions beyond and blends into the gateway to historic South Street. Cozy up to the social justice table and navigate menus of notable events from the late 1700s to modern day. Create a custom itinerary of local and statewide sites to see, based on interest. Attend one of the many community programs and events.

Start your journey through Auburn here and discover why the Heritage Center is more than just a welcome center. 🏳️

Auburn Public Theater

8 Exchange Street | (315) 253-6669 | auburnpublictheater.org

Established in 2005, Auburn Public Theater is a non-profit, multi-venue performing arts center that celebrates diverse voices and artistic expression.

Originally home to Grant's Department Store in the mid-1950s, the two-floor, 26,000-square-foot building houses five rentable event spaces: Main Stage, a 200-seat theater and stage; Auburn Public Cinema, a 65-seat independent movie theater; Stage Right, a 100-seat cabaret space; Auburn Public Studio, an arts education and rehearsal space; and Cafe 108, a for-profit coffee shop whose profits directly benefit the theater.

The theater enriches the social, cultural, and economic growth of Central New York by bringing people together through affordable access to live performance, cinema, arts education, and community events. It serves more than 16,000 patrons and students annually through its partnerships and runs a regranting program that benefits local artists. The theater also produces the Cayuga Film Festival in association with Cayuga Community College.

By providing a top-notch, intimate venue for artists and audiences, the theater makes worldly performance art a common local experience and offers something for everyone in a space where all are welcome.

Seward House Museum

33 South Street | (315) 252-1283 | sewardhouse.org

The Seward House Museum is the historic home of William Henry Seward and his family. This beautifully preserved home contains one of the largest original collections in the United States and is surrounded by two acres of lush gardens and trees. The interior has been restored to its original beauty and features an unmatched collection of political and travel souvenirs, decorative arts, and photographs that span Seward's nearly 40-year political career.

Seward was one of the foremost politicians of 19th century America, serving as state senator, governor of New York, U.S. senator, and secretary of state for Presidents Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson. He famously negotiated the purchase of Alaska, which was given the nickname "Seward's Folly."

The museum also highlights other members of the family, including Frances Seward, who played an important role as her husband's advisor. A free-thinker, she supported the Women's Rights Movement and aided Harriet Tubman in her work on the Underground Railroad by hiding freedom seekers in the basement of the home. With so much to discover, the Seward House Museum is truly one house with many stories.

Cayuga Museum of History & Art

203 Genesee Street | (315) 253-8051 | cayugamuseum.org

The Cayuga Museum of History & Art operates through a campus of three historic buildings: the 1836 Greek Revival Willard-Case Mansion, the Case Research Laboratory, and the Carriage House Theater, a multi-use performance venue.

Operating as a family estate for a century, the property became home to the Cayuga Museum in 1936. Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the mansion features many original details, including a stained glass window designed by the Tiffany Glass Co. in 1890. From its founding, the museum has preserved Cayuga County's largest collection of cultural materials.

Today, the Cayuga Museum features a dynamic schedule of programs and changing exhibits on the people, places, and stories that shaped Cayuga County and the nation. The museum also features two long-term exhibits, which explore 19th-century medicine through the collections of the Cayuga County Medical Society, and Auburn Correctional Facility through stories of people like prison reformer Thomas Mott Osborne. $ 3

Case Research Laboratory

203 Genesee Street | (315) 253-8051 | cayugamuseum.org/caseresearchlab

Case Research Lab Museum, the birthplace of sound film, is one of the three historic structures maintained by the Cayuga Museum of History & Art. Here, inventor Theodore Case turned his mansion's greenhouse into a fully operational laboratory, exploring many different ways that light and sound could be used in the bustling world of the early 20th century.

The museum exhibits the darkroom, chemistry lab, and recording studio; the first sound camera; experimental recording equipment; and a history of the commercialization of sound film, including such ventures as Phonofilms, Fox-Case Movietone, and Fox Films (now 20th Century Fox).

The collection contains lab notebooks; volumes of technical drawings and photographs; business and personal correspondence; manuscripts and reports; patents, receipts, and scrapbooks spanning the 18-year history of the lab. The collection also includes archival materials from Case's partner, Oscar-winner Earl Sponable.

The artifacts tell the tale of Case's constant experimentation with Sponable, battles over ownership with radio mogul Lee De Forest, and the active push to record the world with Fox-Case Movietone. The lab is also a featured site on the Finger Lakes Film Trail.

Schweinfurth Art Center

205 Genesee Street | (315) 255-1553 | myartcenter.org

A leading art institution in the region, the Schweinfurth hosts more than a dozen exhibitions each year in its three galleries. The art center hosts displays of contemporary art and features local, regional, national, and even international artists.

The art center runs two annual juried exhibitions: Made in NY in the spring, featuring works by artists who live in New York State, and Quilts=Art=Quilts from late October through early January, an art quilt exhibit that draws entries from around the world.

The Schweinfurth is known internationally for its focus on fiber arts, and runs an annual art quilt conference, Quilting by the Lake. In addition, visitors from around the country come to Auburn for intensive fiber art workshops taught by top artists.

The art center is an essential part of the local cultural community, participating in citywide events, offering art classes for both youth and adults, and selling unique items in its gift shop.

Galleries are closed during installations;

Fort Hill Cemetery

19 Fort Street | (315) 253-8132 | forthillcemetery.net

Steeped in history, Fort Hill Cemetery is a must-see for history buffs and Underground Railroad enthusiasts. Open year-round from dawn until dusk, Fort Hill is easy to navigate by car or foot.

Due to its geographical location, Fort Hill was used by Indigenous Americans in the 16th century and is regarded as one of the best preserved fortified villages of the Cayuga Nation. The cemetery is also home to the iconic Chief Logan Monument.

Notable people buried onsite include Harriet Tubman, abolitionist, political activist, former enslaved African American, and conductor on the Underground Railroad; Theodore Case, philanthropist, inventor of sound film; William Henry Seward, secretary of state for Abraham Lincoln, abolitionist, New York governor and senator; Martha Coffin Wright, suffragist and political advocate; Colonel John L. Hardenbergh, founder of Auburn; and Captain Myles Keogh, an Irish native who led a successful Union Army attack on Stonewall Jackson. Revel in the architecture of Bradley Memorial Chapel, a gothic inspiration that was designed by Julius Schweinfurth.

In 2021, Fort Hill Cemetery celebrated 170 years of service, and continues today as a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of this historic site.

Seymour Public Library

176-178 Genesee Street | (315) 252-2571 | seymourlibrary.org

Seymour Library was started in 1876 with money bequeathed by James Seymour, president of the National Bank of Auburn, and was originally located in the Phoenix Building. Since 1903, Seymour Library has been housed in the Case Memorial Building. On the National Register of Historic Places, this monumental limestone and brick building was designed by the New York City firm, Carrere and Hastings, designers of the New York Public Library. Like NYPL, Seymour

Library has its own set of lions that can be seen from the original Genesee Street entrance. Other architectural features include: glass floors, ornate interior carving, and a glass roof.

Today, Seymour Library continues to inspire a love of reading, learning, and discovery with robust programming, dynamic resources for an increasingly diverse community, and by building friendships among our neighbors.

The library's History Discovery Center provides research assistance to those seeking local history and genealogical information, genealogical workshops, exhibits, and resources that include maps, pamphlets, images, newspapers on microfilm, online research tools, a digital newspaper archive, and more.

Information about upcoming free programs and events can be found on the library's website.

Willard Memorial Chapel

17 Nelson Street | (315) 252-0339 | willard-chapel.com

Touted as the “Tiffany Treasure of the Finger Lakes,” Willard Memorial Chapel is the only complete and unaltered Tiffany chapel known to exist in the world.

The chapel and adjoining Welch Memorial Building are the only remaining buildings of the Auburn Theological Seminary, an educational facility founded in 1820. The buildings were used for religious education until 1939.

From 1892 to 1894, Georgiana and Caroline Willard contracted Tiffany Glass and Decorating Co. of New York City to build and furnish Willard Chapel in memory of their parents, Dr. Sylvester Willard and Mrs. Jane Frances Case Willard.

The chapel features 14 opalescent windows, a rose window, a large portrait window, nine Moresque-style chandeliers, a memorial tablet of glass mosaic tile and gilt bronze designed by Jacob Holzer, oak furnishings inlaid with metal and glass mosaic, a ceiling with gold leaf stencils, and mosaic flooring.

In 1990, the Community Preservation Committee purchased the chapel when the then owners considered selling the Tiffany windows and furnishings. The building, which is a National Historic Landmark, is used for tours, weddings, concerts, and special events.
